Short Course #2 - Surgical Research Boot Camp: From Idea to Publication, Funding, and Beyond

Presented by the EAST Research-Scholarship Committee and the EAST Multicenter Trials Committee

Making the leap from unfunded, mentored-led research as a resident, fellow, or junior faculty to a funded investigator requires a significant investment (in personal development, creation of preliminary research, and time). For many, especially those at institutions without mature research labs, this transition is often the single most significant barrier to independent funding. This session will focus on the time between unfunded, mentor-driven research and the first independent funding application. Specifically, identifying mentors, finding seed money to support research, and creating preliminary evidence to make their proposals more attractive. This course will provide an overview of early steps to becoming an independently funded investigator.

Speakers: Rachael Callcut, MD, MSPH & John Harvin, MD, MS

- Personal development: finding the right mentor, advanced training in basic science/clinical research, identification of a topic and evaluation of the present evidence to identify gaps in knowledge
- Funding opportunities: internal awards, society grants, philanthropic organizations, industry funding
- IRB and Consent
- Creating preliminary data: trauma registry
- Creating preliminary data: surveys
- Creating preliminary data: observational studies
- Creating preliminary data: large dataset research
- Creating preliminary data: multi-center studies
- How to respond to rejection and revisions

Short Course #3

Prevention is the Best Medicine: Building and Maintaining a High-Quality Injury Prevention Program in Any Setting

Presented by the EAST Injury Control and Violence Prevention Committee & the Society of Trauma Nurses

Trauma Centers are required to have an organized and effective approach to injury prevention in order to maintain ACS verification, including screening for alcohol use and at least two programs addressing a major cause of injury in the community. While all verified trauma centers have an injury and violence prevention program, there is great variation in how this is implemented. To deeply impact injury prevention, programs must expand, coordinate efforts, share the results of their interventions and experiences through validated research, and provide a voice in the community to advocate at the local, state, and national levels.

This course aims to explore strategies for growing injury prevention programs across a full spectrum. The Society of Trauma Nurses will explain their injury prevention group's recommendations for programs for each level of trauma center. The course will cover how to design and grow a program with low resources and explore injury prevention issues specific to the pediatric population. The course will also explore how to expand existing programs into research, advocacy, and multicenter collaboration.

Moderators: Courtney Edwards, DNP, MPH, RN, CCRN, CEN, TCRN, NEA-BC & Rachel Rodriguez, MD

Injury Prevention Advocacy:
How to Find Your VoicePresented by the EAST Injury Control and Violence Prevention Committee*

Trauma is the leading cause of death for people up to age 45 and remains the fourth leading cause of death for all ages. Trauma, by definition, is preventable. As trauma surgeons, our career is devoted to helping people recover from injury, but our unique perspective is essential to an understanding of the risk factors for injury, understanding the impact to society, and helping people to understand why injury prevention is necessary. Unfortunately, many physicians may be unsure of how to approach advocacy or to visualize what alternative career paths exist in the fields of advocacy and public policy. Finally, certain employers may place or suggest restrictions on how physicians can use their voice, particularly in politically charged topics such as violence prevention.

This course aims to guide healthcare providers who wish to be involved in injury prevention advocacy. This course will clarify the legal questions for physicians engaging with legislators, provide effective strategies for presenting a message effectively, and discuss pathways for physicians interested in public policy and advocacy.

Trauma, Emergency, and Humanitarian Surgery in Austere Settings: Cases, Ethical Conundrums, and Compromises

Presented by the EAST Military Committee and the EAST Emergency General Surgery Committee

Surgery in austere and significantly resource-limited environments presents multiple challenges to even the most experienced providers, and frequently calls for innovative approaches that may differ significantly from practices in more well-resourced settings. In the setting of an active conflict, multiple additional factors and considerations are introduced that greatly complicate the provision of high-quality and effective medical and surgical care. These challenges also frequently go beyond standard medical and surgical technique and decision making, and involve difficult ethical, moral, and medicolegal considerations. Although much more commonly encountered in austere or military environments, these issues mirror those that will be seen during civilian large-scale mass casualty or disaster scenarios even in high resource settings. This session will focus on real case-based scenarios presented by expert speakers with personal experience providing both emergency and humanitarian surgical care in zones of active conflict. The speakers will include representatives from both military and civilian organizations, and cases will be presented to the panel members and audience in an open discussion format. In addition to the speakers, the panel will include a trauma surgeon with an advanced degree in bioethics, Allan Peetz, MD.

Traditional Surgical M&M vs. Just Culture Principles: A Better Way to Learn from Our Mistakes

Presented by the EAST Quality, Safety, and Outcomes Committee

With the widespread dissemination and adoption of “Just Culture,” traditional surgical Morbidity and Mortality (M&M) conferences have been scrutinized for being too focused on individual performance and for failing to effectively address systems-level opportunities. In addition, discussion at surgical M&M conferences has commonly shifted from opportunities for improvement and development of action plans to more of a concise review of the contemporary literature regarding a specific complication. This has led to the evolution of this important surgical conference into a predominantly educational format at many institutions. While a blameless Just Culture attempts to build and sustain a culture of safety, it too has been criticized, mainly for marginalizing personal accountability. This plenary session will discuss the advantages of the traditional surgical M&M conference as well as those of a Just Culture approach with the goal of developing ideas on how to best incorporate Just Culture into the traditional surgical M&M process and vice versa. The end result will be to develop an optimal method for us to learn from our mistakes.

Moderator: Scott Armen, MD

Andrew Bernard, MD – The Just Culture Approach
Nicole Stassen, MD – Introducing Just Culture into Surgical M&M

Equity on the Front Lines of Trauma Surgery: An #EAST4ALL Roundtable

Presented by the EAST Equity, Quality, and Inclusion in Trauma Surgery Practice Ad Hoc Task Force

The presence of inequality is an unfortunate phenomenon that exists in medicine and surgery. Although explicit bias (such as overt acts of sexism or racism) has been identified as professionally unacceptable, implicit bias occurs and promotes persistent disparities between groups. Understanding the various forms of bias, how to identify and classify them, and how to react and intervene effectively in real-time will be the focus of this interactive discussion and expert panel session. The inception of this question came about during the discussion portion of the inaugural #EAST4ALL plenary at the 2019 annual meeting, when audience members spoke up and said they still see evidence of explicit bias and struggle to know what to do when explicit bias presents itself.

This session will be structured with two dynamic moderators and multiple expert panel speakers representing a wide range of perspectives and demographics (junior faculty to division chief). Case scenarios dealing with explicit and implicit bias, microaggressions and disparity in pay will be presented and discussed. Additional scenarios will also present recent real-world events or controversial issues involving equity, bias, and the patterns of response to the incidents (“Call-Outs”), in real time and on social media. Panelists will give their opinions on how to manage these situations when faced with them directly or when they witness others being faced by this. By analyzing and discussing these reports, attendees will develop skills to identify bias and methods to address it in real time in their practice and develop the tools to be an upstander.

Next Generation Pediatric Trauma Management

Presented by the EAST Guidelines Committee and the Pediatric Trauma Society

Most injured children are managed in adult or combined trauma centers, while Pediatric Trauma Centers only see 40% of injured children. Recently, the Pediatric Trauma Society and the American Pediatric Surgical Association have developed evidence-based guidelines to direct the care of pediatric trauma patients. This session will present pediatric trauma cases that highlight one of the recently published guidelines - Blunt Liver/Spleen Guidelines, Blunt Renal Injuries, Venous Thromboembolism Prophylaxis and the Initial Management of Blunt Abdominal Trauma. An interactive panel will discuss the use of the guidelines for each case.

Moderator: Christian Streck, Jr., MD

Taking the Lead: Strategies for Leading within Your Group An EAST Leadership Development Workshop

TUESDAY, JANUARY 14, 2020 • 8:00 AM-4:00 PM

Presented by the EAST Career Development Committee

Target Audience: Early Career and Mid-Career Trauma & Acute Care Surgeons including Fellows-in-Training

Needs Statement: A successful career as an acute care surgeon requires education, planning, and guidance. Not all young surgeons have experts in career development in their mentor pool. This workshop provides essential contacts and education to help acute care surgeons succeed.

Overview: This workshop is part of the EAST Leadership Development series. It is a three-part, multi-year course focusing on the career development of the early career trauma surgeon. Each workshop is designed to be a stand-alone course. In this way, surgeons can participate in the course at any time in the three-part series. The 2020 workshop will focus on leadership skills and strategies for individuals leading within a group or division. The knowledge and skills gained at this workshop can be applied not only at one's own medical center but also at the organizational level. Team-based learning exercises will be incorporated to encourage an active learning experience and provide more opportunity for interaction with workshop faculty. The faculty members include distinguished trauma and acute care surgery leaders known for excellence.

Learner Objectives:

At the conclusion of the workshop, the participant should be better able to:

1. Describe effective team leading strategies within a diverse workplace
2. Recognize different personality types and apply that knowledge to challenging leadership scenarios
3. Analyze difficult leadership situations and apply leadership and team-building principles.

Advanced Practitioners in Trauma Workshop – Addressing Professional & Clinical Development When Caring for the Acutely Injured Patient

THURSDAY, JANUARY 16, 2020 • 1:30 PM-5:45 PM

Presented by EAST and the Society of Trauma Nurses (STN)

Target Audience: Advanced Practitioners

Needs Statement: Advanced Practitioners in Trauma comprise physician assistants and advanced practice nurses in a variety of settings. Each year, a task force representing APs from EAST and the Society of Trauma Nurses meets to identify areas involving emergency general surgery, critical care, and trauma care in which updated information can be disseminated. This year's workshop aims to provide a balance of clinical and professional content that will continue to strengthen the role of the AP.

Overview: The 2020 EAST workshop for Advanced Practitioners (APs) will provide insight into management of the injured patient and best practices for APs throughout trauma, critical care, and emergency general surgery. This workshop aims to provide a balance of clinical and professional content. Coagulopathy in trauma is an ongoing struggle for clinicians to manage. Information addressing heparin induced thrombocytopenia, trauma induced coagulopathy, and management of DOACs will be provided. Many advanced practitioners serve as educators, preceptors, and mentors. Evidenced based practices for providing feedback and how to best mentor new providers will be discussed. Real and practical tools that have proven success will be disseminated. As EAST continues to grow and update its practice management guidelines, insight into the process on both the institutional and national level will be shared. Learners will identify opportunities to build guidelines within their own institution as well as contribute to EAST's robust process. A panel of providers will share cases addressing great saves and near misses. The workshop will conclude with opportunities for attendees to share similar experiences.

Learner Objectives:

At the conclusion of this workshop, the participant should be better able to:

1. Identify coagulopathy in the injured patient, methods to treat, and agents for reversal of medication-induced-coagulopathy
2. List tools for providing feedback to learners and determine evidenced based best practices.
3. Discuss methods for involvement in guideline development on the institutional and national levels.
